KUALA LUMPUR – The National Defence University of Malaysia (UPNM) today launched a Creative Hub featuring two new studios – the Digital Studio (Green Screen Studio) and the Maker Space – to strengthen the university's digital learning facilities. In a statement issued today, UPM announced that the RM1.9 million project was implemented through an allocation under the 5th Rolling Plan (RP5) of the 12th Malaysia Plan (12MP). This marks the beginning of a new phase in the university's academic modernisation while stimulating critical thinking among its community. According to the statement, the Digital Studio facility will serve as a hub for professional video production, multimedia recording, documentaries, and interactive digital learning content while the collaborative Maker Space provides a creative environment to foster innovation rooted in 21st-century educational aspirations. Meanwhile, UPNM Vice-Chancellor Lieutenant General Datuk Wira Arman Rumaizi Ahmad stated that the launch of the Creative Hub was held concurrently with the inauguration of the General Tun Ibrahim Gallery at the General Tun Ibrahim Library (PJTI), UPNM, ensuring that elements of military history and modernisation progress hand-in-hand. Through the 12MP, RP5 allocation totaling RM1.9 million, this library has successfully implemented various initiatives for infrastructure empowerment and learning digitalisation," he said. "Among these are the computer lab upgrading project and the construction of two new facilities, namely the Green Screen Studio and the Maker Space, collectively known as the Creative Hub," he added.
